Jim Capo Elected

Balance of power shifts to people

November 3, 2004

Citizens, parents, and taxpayers won control of their local Guilford County government yesterday by electing "Wildcard Factor" Jim Capo to a seat on the county Board of Commissioners. It was the most dramatic and significant outcome in all of the local election races.

Running a strong campaign as a Libertarian candidate in District 7 against the "Mike or Mike" choice offered by the county's established parties, Capo's victory left the county board evenly divided 5-5 between Democrats and Republicans.

Capo told his ecstatic supporters late last night as his stunning victory became uncontested, "The 11th and deciding swing vote is now firmly in the hands of the citizens of Guilford County. We have gained back control of our local government. The people have won!"
